

#286

born with a weak heart full of summer fields and sneezes, too much grass too much sun.
you sing
without meaning to scare away the fall, bleached trees buried in your voice treasures forgotten in gorgeous deserts built by gorgeous stories about a girl who made air nectar for her favorite season.