

#287

What does a juggler do when fog follows in threes, swarming uneasily to the lake,
as he wades in waist deep?

What does a juggler do when water is chest high, barely keeping his hands above,
to fight right rolling by?

What does a juggler do when mist reaches his tongue, ice now among the warm words inside,
water filling his lungs?