

deer

confess your dream
tell me
about the emaciated fawn frantic to find its balance on the steep cliff beside the highway

the cars are suckling
at the air like its meat engines humming ready to roll over bones

her pallid eyes flush
your face but you are empty and needing you
are so hungry
for the chance at restraint